THE ACTORS

Malcolm Bennett

This is Malcolm's second show with the Kodiak Arts Council, having recently played The Reverend in "Shadowlands." Despite the fun Malcolm is having acting and working in Kodiak, he is eager to return to Los Angeles to continue his pursuit of the silver screen. Keep your eye out for Malcolm in the "Moving Men" infomercial on cable TV and the independent film, "Title Nine," soon to be released.

Bill Bissett

Bill comes to Kodiak from Midland, Texas, dinner theater. On the Kodiak stage he played Bill Filbert in "Blazing Guns at Roaring Gulch" and the title role in "Thataway Jack." He is also the voice in the Village Bar and Cy's on KVOK. He is eager to do more plays.

Rebecca Dawn

In addition to many dramas and musicals, Rebecca has appeared in three dinner theater productions, most recently as the villainous Bertha DeBlues in "Who Put the Overalls in Mrs. Murphy's Chowder?" She is happy to be reunited with David Weinand, to whom she played opposite in the Kodiak production of "A - My Name is Alice," which took second place honors at the Alaska State Theater Competition.

Mat Freeman

Mat starred as the villain of a high school melodrama in 1981 and has appeared in about 25 shows since, recently in "Shadowlands" and "Thataway Jack." This is Mat's fifth appearance in a Kodiak Arts Council/Morning Rotary Club dinner theater presentation.

Peri Pinto

Peri is best known to Kodiak audiences as the narrator in "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat." She broke into theater in the fourth grade as the last-minute replacement for the king in "The Princess and the Pea." Other credits include "Bound for Broadway" in Kodiak, "Little Orphan Annie" in college and the role of Aunt Polly in a musical version of "Tom Sawyer."

Melissa Roldan

Melissa's theater credits have blossomed since she came to Kodiak. She played the title role in "Rumpelstiltskin," Jo in "Little Women," and Ado Annie in "Oklahoma." She intends to continue theatrical training in college and hopes to use her acting experience as a basis for directing.

David Weinand

David has a long history on the Kodiak stage, beginning as Purlov in the "Cry of the Wild Ram." Among many other parts, he played the title role in "The Nerd" and sang Freddy in "My Fair Lady" and the Pharaoh in "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat." He would like to leave Kodiak and become a famous movie star, but he just can't commit.
